

Editors' Picks: 12 Things to See in New York This Week

Sarah Cascone, January 8, 2018

Thursday, January 11–Sunday, February 11

Carol Szymanski's Stimmung-Tuned In (re.Te-10) (2017). Image courtesy of TOTAH.

7. “Carol Szymanski: Pareidolia” at TOTAH

Carol Szymanski's new exhibition, “Pareidolia,” is comprised of photos of her previous body of work—a series of inflated Mylar sculptures shaped like letters from a lost alphabet, titled Songs of Solfège. Shot so close as to reveal only a small, abstract section of the surface of the sculptures, the “Pareidolia” photos aren't so much a documentation of the original works as they are an addendum, further exploring the interrelationship of language, sound, and sight.

Location: TOTAH, 183 Stanton Street

Price: Free

Time: Opening reception, 6 p.m.–8 p.m.; Wednesday–Sunday, 11 a.m.–6 p.m. and by appointment

